Woman grateful for MLGW worker’s honesty

Ann Massey is thanking her lucky stars that MLGW’s Carolyn Hulbert of Physical Security discovered her bank envelope that dropped out of her vehicle with $1,000 cash inside.

As she was filling up her car at a BP station, Hulbert saw a Regions Bank envelope on the ground. “I thought it’s probably empty. I continued pumping my gas. I felt the Lord saying, pick it up.”

“The enemy in my mind said, ‘You know you could use that money. Keep it,’” she said. Hulbert asked Massey, who was standing at the adjoining gas pumps, “Did you lose something?” Hulbert held up the envelope.

Massey grabbed her in a grateful hug. “She almost squeezed me to death,” Hulbert said. Even though Massey offered her a reward, Hulbert wanted no part of it. “I was just glad to help her. That was the most important thing,” she said. “If it had happened to me, I would have wanted someone to return the money.”

Ringing in the New Year

MLGW’s Andrew Stanley gets some extra bell ringing help from his nephew, 17-month-old Evrin Stanley. The two collected money for The Salvation Army Kettle Campaign in downtown Memphis. About 35 MLGW employees and retirees rang the bell over a period of 14 days during the holiday season.

MINE program helps residents save on energy usage

Throughout 2017, MLGW spoke to a number of community groups and schools through the MLGW in Neighborhoods Everywhere program on how to be energy smart in their homes.

Dozens of residents learned some simple ways to reduce energy usage through the MINE program. During a meeting in Whitehaven, Derrick Dones, Residential Services, gave an analogy in a town that breathes basketball on the importance of having an air tight house.

"Your home is like a big basketball. If that basketball has a lot of pin holes in it, no matter how much air you pump into it, it will continue to lose air until you fix the holes in the ball," Dones said.

"Just like you plug a basketball if it has holes in it, you need to plug those areas around the doors and windows and increase your attic insulation in your home," he said. "Doing these things addresses the shell of the home or what we call the thermal envelope."

After each community session, residents were given energy conservation kits that included LED light bulbs, caulking and low-flow faucet aerators.

If your community or school group would like to hear about being energy smart or other programs we offer, contact Beverly Perkins, Corporate Communications, at 528-4820 or bperkins@mlgw.org.

Protect your pipes from freezing

Freezing temperatures make your pipes susceptible to the effects of cold weather. Here are five ways to prevent your pipes from freezing:

- Open interior cabinet doors to expose pipes to warmer air
- Let water drip from any faucet served by exposed pipes
- Wrap or cover all exposed outside faucets
- Lower your thermostat if you’re away from your home but avoid turning it off completely
- Insulate any water pipes in the crawl space or basement

Five fire safety tips for your home

Let’s start off the New Year by making our homes safer from a potential fire:

- Install a smoke detector and fire extinguisher on every level of your home
- Keep space heaters at least three-feet away from all flammable materials
- Avoid overloading electrical circuits
- Keep lighters and matches out of a child’s reach
- Change furnace filters seasonally
